"OH, DOCTOR!"

Universal Jewel

Starring REGINALD DENNY

RUFUS BILLUPS, Junior, was so uncertain of continuing his existence when he entered this world that the doctors had him kept in an incubator for a number of weeks.

His parents were gentle people who believed that if he didn't have every disease under the sun he was apt to get them, and so kept his boyhood divided between medicine bottles and thermometers.

Somehow, he managed to survive the doctors and the medicines and grew to be a rather husky young man, but still continuing to take medicines and thermometers at the slightest excitement.

He was the heir to quite a large fortune, but owing to a provision in the will, he could only touch a very small part of it and would have to wait three more years before he could get his hands completely on it. During this period he lived with his aunt. She was a vigorous woman who believed that a man should eat hard-boiled eggs and raw meat, so he got little sympathy from her.

At a doctor's suggestion, three canny Scotchmen were induced to loan him $100,000 against his fortune of $750,000, that he would live the three years necessary to inherit his fortune.

To guarantee "their investment," they obtained the prettiest nurse in the town to look after him. Instantly Rufus became a changed man. He started to go in for sport because the charming little nurse was evidently fond of he-men, according to the literature she read. He tried automobile racing, and on one occasion when he climbed a flagpole, the three Scotchmen almost dropped dead, and gladly signed a release which would give them their money back and eight per cent interest. This was manipulated by the little nurse, who threatened she would not marry Rufe if he would not immediately slide down the pole.
